Romanian refugee in search of prime doghouse

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A PUPPY struck by a car on a Romanian road and left for dead instead winged her way across the globe and is in search of a Carmel home, according to her rescuer, Nancy Janes.

The founder of Romania Animal Rescue, which aims to help control the huge population of homeless dogs there, Janes found Anamarie in the city of Galatsi, where an estimated 12,000 dogs live starving on the streets. Janes decided to give the puppy, who is partially paralyzed with a broken back, a chance at life.

"She was just on the side of the road, and I knew nobody would have the money to take care of her, to do anything for her," said Janes. The puppy, almost 6 months old, pulled herself along the ground with her front legs, dragging her motionless lower body behind her.

"I was going to take her to a vet there and have her put to sleep, and then I thought, I'm just going to try," she said.

Janes had the young dog vaccinated and cleared to enter the United States. Next, she bought a little wheeled cart that holds the puppy's hind legs and rear end off the ground while she propels herself with her front legs.

As Janes and her husband, Rory, vacationed in Carmel this week, she grew convinced someone from this wealthy dog haven would provide a home for the crippled Anamarie, a small collie mix.

"The city she came from is absolutely filthy." Principally a steel mining area, like so many towns in the former Soviet bloc, Galatsi is poverty stricken, according to Janes.

'Starving, thirsty and abused'

Anamarie is not the first dog Janes brought to the states from Romania to find a better home. She founded her small nonprofit Romania Animal Rescue about five years ago with the intention of helping the out-of-control population there.

Post office strips walls of Bates cartoons

■ Only USPS materials allowed, officials say

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BYE-BYE Bill Bates.

A U.S. Postal Service "retail standardization team" swept through the Fifth Avenue post office in downtown Carmel last week, decreeing nothing could hang on the walls but USPS paraphernalia. No more lost-dog signs, Forest Theater playbills or psychic-reading fliers may be tacked to bulletin boards in the wood-paneled box lobby. And the collection of Bill Bates' classic Carmel cartoons came down from the walls of the front office for good.

"We have to comply," said acting postmaster Carlos Santiago, though he's hoping to reason with the powers that be. "It's happening everywhere."

It's not a new rule, "but apparently it's never been enforced at that facility," he said.

He contacted Bates to see what should be done with the framed drawings, which entertained patrons standing in slow-moving lines and captivated visitors for years.

Pilot desal plant arrives in Moss Landing

By KELLY NIX

CALIFORNIA AMERICAN Water Co. officials were all smiles Wednesday as the company's long-awaited desal pilot plant arrived in Moss Landing.

The pilot plant, which Cal Am has sought for more than a year, came in three trucks to the Moss Landing power plant.

"Because so much of the progress to date has been about filing applications or receiving permits," said Catherine Bowie, community relations manager for Cal Am. "It's really gratifying to see some physical evidence of the project moving forward."

The plant, which is to be skid-mounted, was manufactured by the Spanish company Pridesa, formerly owned by Cal Am's parent corporation. It arrived in the Port of Oakland and stayed in customs for two weeks before being shipped to Moss Landing.

On Wednesday, crews from Granite Construction carefully unloaded the shipments, which included the reverse osmosis unit, pretreatment filters and fiberglass tanks.

The plant will be a test bed for a much larger desal operation Cal Am plans to build at the Moss Landing power plant, now owned by LS Power Group. Cal Am hopes to avoid permit complications by using the existing power plant intake and outfall in Monterey Bay.

The pilot plant will pump 200,000 gallons of water each day and produce 90,000 gallons of potable water, which will be tested for quality before being returned to the ocean. The remaining 110,000 gallons of water, its salinity and temperature slightly raised, will also be pumped back to the sea.

The pilot plant's units will be stored at the LS Power Group

Mansion's massive paper trail delays legal battle

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE COURT fight over the sale of Flanders Mansion was to begin Thursday, but the arduous and expensive process of compiling all the transcripts, memoranda and official documents leading up to the council's 2005 decision to sell the mansion will push the trial date into the fall.

That's according to Bill Connors, the attorney defending the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea against the Flanders Foundation.

Citing alleged violations of state environmental laws and local ordinances, the foundation sued the city last November.

"I can't point at anyone and say it's their fault," Connors said regarding the delay. "It's just one of those things that takes a while to get done."

Flanders Foundation President Melanie Billig agreed the June 22 target date to begin the writ of mandate hearing was simply too optimistic.

"They've been very cooperative," she said of Carmel city officials. "We have worked very harmoniously

Groovy, man! Pacific Grove gets in touch with its hippie roots

By KELLY NIX

ALTHOUGH THE SUVs and million-dollar homes don't reflect it now, Pacific Grove was once a hippie hang-out. City buildings that are now restaurants and retail stores used to be communes full of longhairs trying to create their vision of freedom, peace and love.

"This area was very much an energy spot for the counter culture," said John Bassett McCleary, author of "The Hippie Dictionary: a Cultural Encyclopedia of the 1960s and 1970s."

"It was a very friendly, open community. Anybody who came along was accepted. We shared a lot together."

The hippie culture in P.G. and New Monterey will be the focus of "Where were you in 1972? A Hippie History of Pagrovia," a lecture presented by McCleary June 23 at the Pacific Grove Performing Arts Center.

"Pacific Grove, partially because of where it is in California and the country, attracted a lot of young people," McCleary said. "For one thing, the Monterey Pop Festival in 1967 sort of focused on this area because the festival was a major turning point in the culture."

The city teemed with alternative-thinking hippies who crashed at various pads in the city.

The building where the popular restaurant Pasta Mia is located on Lighthouse Avenue was a commune called Big Stink, coined after The Band's album, "Music from Big Pink," said Sally Aberg, a member of the Heritage Society of Pacific Grove, which is sponsoring the lecture.

A local man "rented the house for himself and four 'hippie chicks' he knew needed a place to live," Aberg said. "Not long after ... more and more and more hippies drifted through."

Just down Lighthouse a few blocks is a small cottage near the 17th Street Grille. The house at the time was a hotbed for hippie activity, some of it illicit, Aberg said.

"I'm told that place used to be called 'The Wall,'" she said. "And it was a gathering place for all the counterculture kids ranging from 12 to 25 years old. That's where you would go, I'm told, if you wanted to find out what was going on that day or to score a certain illegal substance, that sort of thing. Everybody who was young knew where that was."

And one Pacific Grove beach, now a popular spot for weddings and tourists, had quite a different vibe in the late '60s and early '70s.

"We spent a lot of time down at Lovers Point," McCleary said. "It was sort of an unofficial topless bathing area down there. People liked to spend time on the beach."

Historic board doesn't like EIR, plans for old bank site

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO WEEKS after the city declared the modern-style former bank building at Dolores and Seventh not historic, the Carmel Historic Resources Board voted to recommend the planning commission not approve the environmental impact report on its demolition and replacement. The HRB said the study failed to address the negative impacts developer John Mandurrage's new shops, housing and bi-level underground parking would have on the adjacent historic district. Members also requested he drastically change his design so it wouldn't mimic historic styles.

In their June 19 staff report to the board, principal planner Brian Roseth and contract planner Elizabeth Caraker advised the HRB to recommend the planning commission certify the EIR. The planning commission has the authority to approve the report and grant the permits for the project.

"It is important for the board to distinguish between impacts on the environment and impacts on community design character," they wrote. People have criticized Mandurrage's design and its allusion to historic architecture, and have pointed out evident conflicts with general plan policies on diverse building styles, but "none of these constitute significant environmental impacts, and they should not influence the board's recommendations on EIR adequacy."

But they also suggested the HRB request design changes to help delineate the new construction from the neighboring blocks of historic Mediterranean Revival, Spanish Colonial and English Cottage buildings.

"In part, it is the exceptional design diversity of the bank building that makes it succeed at this location, and that has generated community support for its preservation," Caraker and Roseth wrote of the 34-year-old building designed by architects Will Shaw and Walter Burde. In December the HRB decided the building was historic, but Mandurrage appealed that decision to the city council, which overturned it June 6.

Chair Julie Wendt doubted the board could certify the EIR but demand design changes.

"The EIR addressed issues of copycat design in regard to the historic issue, but I think they dismissed them as general plan issues," which are typically not analyzed in environmental studies, she said. "But in this case, the impact is on the historic district. I think the issues are intertwined. I don't think you can say the project must be redesigned to

Excessive speed likely culprit in Highlands wrecks

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO RESCUE helicopters attempted to airlift victims of separate Carmel Highlands car wrecks that occurred within minutes of each other Monday night, but poor visibility prevented the choppers from landing, according to police and firefighters. Instead, a 26-year-old man from Marina and a 28-

DUI driver hits cyclist

A DRUNKEN driver ran his car into a bicyclist on Carmel Valley Road Wednesday night and fled, according to the California Highway Patrol. Around 6:40 p.m., Carmel resident Michael Bolick, 23, was driving his 2004 Ford Escort near Prado del Sol at 60 mph when he swerved into the eastbound bike lane and struck 49-year-old Carmel Valley resident Allan Wanta. Witnesses reported the driver did not stop, instead driving to Mid Valley Center, parking his car and running toward the Carmel River. CHP officers apprehended Bolick and booked him into Monterey County Jail on charges of felony DUI and hit-and-run, as well as on an outstanding warrant for being unlicensed. Wanta sustained serious injuries to his head, arms and legs, so he was airlifted to Regional Medical Center.

year-old Oxford, England, resident were taken by ambulance to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for treatment of major injuries.

Timothy Sliter had been drinking but was not legally drunk when he lost control of his red 2003 Ford Mustang at 9:50 p.m. June 19, according to California Highway Patrol public information officer Larry Starkey. The car hit a phone pole and got hung up on a Highway 1 guardrail, sustaining major front-end and passenger-side damage. Officers suspect Sliter was speeding.

About 10 minutes later and a quarter-mile down the highway, Svetlana Podobed, 28, was driving northbound and likely took a corner too quickly, causing her rented 2006 Chevrolet Monte Carlo to run onto the shoulder, according to Starkey. She overcorrected, causing the car to skid off the west side of the road and roll once before coming to rest against a group of three large pine trees.

Chris Hartzell of Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District was on the first engine to respond to Sliter's accident, which required closing down the lane to pull the Mustang off the guardrail.

"A bunch of bystanders walked up to say there was a second accident about a quarter mile down the road, so we left a firefighter at the scene and drove on to find a second vehicle that had driven about 40 feet over the side and rolled," he said. Podobed and her male passenger, who reportedly sustained head injuries, had managed to get out and climb back up to the road.

Fire engines from the neighboring Cypress Fire Protection District's Rio Road and Carmel Hill stations rushed to assist, along with two ambulances and the CHP.

While firefighters and medics assisted the injured and secured the accident scenes, a Carmel Fire Department crew established landing zones for two incoming CalSTAR helicopters that would carry Podobed's injured male passenger and Sliter to a trauma center. But poor visibility prevented their landing, according to CFD, so ambulances carried the patients to CHOMP. Podobed refused medical attention.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Connors, R.N.

REMAIN ENGAGED

The notion of a passive retirement is fast losing favor—if it were ever really popular at all. The idea that one suddenly quits working and happily retires to the living room couch has probably been more of a media stereotype than a reality anyway. Whatever the case may be, numerous surveys that have been conducted since 2000 show that most people tend to look ahead to retirement with the desire to make it more meaningful than a mere prolonged vacation. Furthermore, research also shows that retirees who remain engaged by volunteering, learning, or working maintain better emotional, cognitive, and physical health. Participating in a rich and full life seems to promote longevity and improve life quality.

Most housing is designed for young, active and mobile people. To live at home, a person must, at the very least, be able to drive, go shopping, cook and do household chores. Some of us will lose one or more of these abilities as we grow older.

P.S. The average 60-year-old today will live to about age 83, although many will live into their 90s.

Meg Parker Connors is an RN and owner of Victorian Health Care Services, Victorian Residential Care Homes and Help-at-Home, a domestic referral service here in Monterey. For assistance, call 655-1935.

Researchers, Big Sur locals get ready to party as bird bash takes flight

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE LIFE of a bird researcher in Big Sur might seem a bit dull to some, but the folks at the Ventana Wilderness Society really do know how to party. And this weekend they'll get a chance to prove it.

The Henry Miller Library will host a "Bird Bash" Saturday, June 24, from 3 p.m. to midnight. The event is a fundraiser for the Ventana Wilderness Society, a local non-profit credited with reintroducing bald eagles and California condors to Big Sur.

"We're looking for a way to reconnect to our roots in Big Sur," explained Karen Ritchie, senior wildlife biologist. "This is our way of honoring the local community and saying thanks for all their support."

The Salinas-based group has plenty to celebrate. From 1986 to 1994, the VWS released 66 juvenile bald eagles, reestablishing Big Sur as a breeding ground for the majestic birds. In 1992, the organization established a research and education center, including an ornithology lab, at Andrew Molera State Park. Not content to rest on its laurels, the VWS began releasing condors into the wild in 1997 and now monitors 38 condors in Central California.

The festive event will showcase some of Big Sur's finest musical homegrown talent. The Big Sur Natives — a popular drumming and dance troupe, and Big Sur's unofficial "house band" — will play, as will the Stanimals, Santa Cruz-based rock 'n' rollers led by longtime Big Sur local Stan Russell. Also performing will be Jamaica, Samba-A-Go-Go and the Suborbitals.

The bash will feature food, refreshments, local crafts vendors, fun and games for kids, a fundraising raffle and talks by VWS staff.

"There will be an educational component to the event, but it's mostly just for fun," said Ritchie.

The library is located on Highway 1, about one quarter-mile south of the landmark Nepenthe restaurant, and about 30 miles south of Carmel.

For more information about the event, call (831) 667-2574 or visit www.henrymiller.org. For more information about the VWS, visit www.ventanaws.org.

together. Doing the administrative record is just a huge, huge, huge amount of work."

While combing through filing cabinets filled with three decades' worth of records to find those germane to the case, Carmel City Clerk Heidi Burch must also listen to and transcribe dozens of hours of public hearings on the Flanders issue. Carmel taxpayers are footing the bill.

"In a normal case, we would have put off the normal business of the city to get this done because you have a developer out there who's losing money waiting for this to get resolved," Connors said. "But in this case, it's not quite as imperative to move forward quickly, since the building is still there and ultimately the council will be able to sell it."

Billig said she and other foundation board members spend four or five hours per day researching the case, determining what they need and where documents be found, and "checking things and rechecking things."

"And of course we plan on winning and want to make sure things in the record are very, very easy to locate," she said. "I'm sure glad I'm not in the business of having to do this on a regular basis."

Connors said he would probably learn a new anticipated start date for the hearing from the court in a few weeks.

"Hopefully Heidi will get the last of the requests, and then we'll be able to finalize the record," he said. "For a normal project, the record would be a few inches thick. This one is several feet."

Water conservation begins in your own yard

- One broken sprinkler can waste 10 gallons of water per minute.

The summer months offer the best opportunities for protecting the Carmel River and the wildlife that depends on it by reducing your outdoor water use.

Broken sprinklers or faulty timer settings could be costing you a lot of water and money. California American Water encourages you to check for any problems that might lead to water waste.

stuffed inside builder Hugh Comstock's charming Tuck Box. The little old lady standing on the back of the large man so she could open her high-up mailbox while he opened his on the bottom row. And firefighters yelling, "Forget the house, save the trees!" Those were just a few of the favorites that hung in rows on the post office walls. All of the works were first published in The Pine Cone after Bates became the paper's resident cartoonist in 1972.

"It's not that [postal officials] didn't like them," Santiago said. "They love the cartoons — they're just not allowed to have those up."

The downtown post office is undergoing a general sprucing up, according to Santiago. Bulletin boards had everything removed save postal service posters pitching stamps and Priority Mail, though the glassed-in board displaying city announcements can stay.

The beloved old boxes and wood paneling will not change, Santiago confirmed.

"Right now we're just painting the inside and trying to standardize the window area," he said.

The box lobby last received a new coat of paint sometime in the 1960s.

Santiago said Thursday he contacted Bates and the "retail standardization team," and he plans to seek permission to hang the Bates cartoons in the box lobby, which is separate from the area where postal workers interact with customers. He also wants to make one bulletin board available for community notices.

"In Pebble Beach, I'm the postmaster, and we have pictures in the lobby area," he said. "Though we are going to do standardization over there, too."

Woodpeckers inspire Internet upgrade at C.V. nature reserve

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE SOUND of a woodpecker — its beak pecking against a tree with all the subtlety of a small jackhammer — is not the first thing you want to hear in the morning, especially if you're trying to sleep in. But to a handful of researchers at UCLA, the sound, commonly described as a "wacha-wacka-wacka," is sweet music to their ears.

Yuan Yao, a graduate student at UCLA, began studying woodpeckers at Hastings Reserve in Carmel Valley two years ago. She hoped to use voice recognition software to identify individual acorn woodpeckers.

The 2,500-acre biological field station — located on Carmel Valley Road about 26 miles east of Highway 1 — is a veritable candy store for woodpecker researchers. In addition to its thriving and often noisy population of the chattering birds, the reserve is one of the few places in the world where the recordings of woodpeckers can be attributed to specific individuals.

Researchers have been studying woodpeckers at Hastings for decades. In an effort to distinguish one bird from another, colored bands have been attached to the legs of each bird. The bands are a great resource for Yao, who hopes to match each woodpecker with its voice recording. But before Yao and her colleagues at UCLA could try out their voice recognition software on the birds, they had to overcome a common computer dilemma: a slow Internet connection.

Thus began a separate but related project. UCLA provided the funding, and the folks at Hastings began upgrading a system which reserve director Mark Stromberg described as "painfully slow." For the past four years, the reserve has relied on a satellite connection. It seemed fast when it was installed, Stromberg explained, but advances in Internet technology have rendered it all but obsolete for the purposes of researchers.

At first, Hastings contacted SBC and made arrangements to have a T1 line installed. Hastings was assured the order could be completed in about 10 days, but after four months, SBC informed Hastings they would have to pay to upgrade about 17 miles of underground phone lines.

Hastings finally settled on a new satellite system, which was to be installed by a San Luis Obispo-based company called Ground Control. But before the new satellite could be set up, Stromberg and his staff were required to reroute and bury a variety of wires, a task which led to several misadventures.

Before successfully trenching the lines, a water line was broken, a well was accidentally disabled and a spring unexpectedly uncovered, creating a muddy pond and getting a tractor stuck in the process.

Ultimately, though, the wires were successfully buried and the new dish was installed in January. But the woodpecker voice recognition project has stalled because of another common computer dilemma: buggy software. Still, the reserve's staff is thrilled about the upgrade.

"The system works fantastic," said Jaime del Valle, a reserve steward. "The speed is absolutely extraordinary. And the whole impetus was the woodpecker project."

Until the software is fixed, researchers won't be able to listen to the woodpeckers remotely. But for staff and visitors, the birds are as noisy as ever.

"They're very sociable," explained Stromberg. "They like to talk to each other. If a bird lands in a tree, they all say hi."

IMPROVING YOUR HOME'S MARKETABILITY

One of the questions we're constantly asked is whether there are cost-effective ways of improving the value and marketability of a home—and indeed, there are. (This becomes particularly relevant to people who are buying a home with the intention of working on it for two years, then selling, pocketing the profits tax-free—thanks to our current tax code—and then buying the next and starting all over again.)

Our population is aging. Baby boomers are reaching retirement age. More people need homes better-suited to advancing years than ever. But they want homes that lend themselves to very active lifestyles.

Two considerations, therefore: Homes located close to exciting cultural activities—near colleges, for example—are particularly important, as are homes in good climates and with other attractive amenities nearby. Second, consider a 1-story house or a 2-story house with a downstairs master bedroom that doesn't require its occupants to make their way up and down stairways. And consider making that house easier for aging residents to live in (with widened doorways, hand-rails for the bathtub and shower, easily-accessed lighting, etc.) Then, when you want to sell, market the home to retirees. You're providing a service and it will probably pay you well. Questions? Just call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

property until Cal Am receives a permit from the California Coastal Commission, which is expected to discuss the matter in August, Bowie said.

Once Cal Am receives the permit, it will take about eight weeks to put the plant together. It could begin operating in October, according to Bowie.

Permit delayed

But while Cal Am expects a coastal commission permit later this year, a permit for a competing desal pilot proposed by the Pajaro/Sunny Mesa Community Services District has already reached the coastal commission. Last week in Santa Rosa, the commission decided the P/SM permit raised a "substantial issue" because of possible impacts on Monterey Bay and decided to hold a full hearing on the matter later this summer.

P/SM is also hoping to build a large-scale desal plant next door to the Moss Landing power plant at the Moss Landing Commercial Park, formerly the National Refractories site.

"The project does not conform to county Local Coastal Plan provisions related to protection of marine biological resources, water quality, water resource development and environmentally sensitive habitat," the coastal commission staff's report concluded.

"I was hoping they would find [the pilot plant] raised a substantial issue," said Kaya Freeman, Surfrider Foundation's Central California regional manager, who attended the June 15 meeting.

Besides environmental concerns, Surfrider appealed the county's permit to the coastal commission because the county did not conduct public hearings prior to approving it.

Also, the coastal commission staff report said Pajaro/Sunny Mesa has not provided adequate scientific studies and biological surveys to show the pilot plant's effects on the environment.

Peter MacLaggan, senior vice president of Poseidon Resources Corp., the company which will operate P/SM's pilot plant, said the company has provided a written response to these concerns.

Although MacLaggan said Poseidon is doing everything it can to address the coastal commission's concerns, he said it's ironic the coastal commission has issues with the pilot plant, considering LS Power draws vastly more water through its intake than Pajaro/Sunny Mesa's pilot plant will.

"We think that given the small quantity of flow that's being taken into the pilot plant, and the fact that it's merely one eight-thousandth of what's happening a few hundred feet to the north of us, the biological impacts that are going to

TAKING SOME HEAT

One of the most common causes of engine overheating is thermostat failure. If the thermostat doesn't open to allow coolant to circulate through the engine, drivers will find themselves stopped on the side of the road in very short order. Thermostat failure can be mechanical in nature, or it may stem from coolant loss. If the upper radiator hose doesn't become hot to the touch within minutes of the engine having been started, it is an indication that the thermostat is defective and needs to be replaced. The replacement thermostat must have the same operating temperature as the original so that the computerized engine controls can continue to properly maintain the operation of the fuel, ignition, and emissions control systems.

Engine overheating can lead to permanent engine damage. To avoid costly repairs later, bring your car to us to have any potential problems averted. Here at Pacific Motor Service, we are committed to excellent customer service, and quality work. That's a promise. Our services are guaranteed for 12 months or 12,000 miles with NAPA Peace of Mind Warranty, and some repairs offer extended warranties.

P.S. All coolant hoses should be inspected at least annually.

occur here are not even measurable," MacLaggan said.

In its response to the coastal commission's appeal, the company has proposed building an intricate filter system that uses much smaller than normal screens to slow the velocity of water going into the pilot plant's intake, MacLaggan said. The technology should help minimize the impact to marine organisms.

The commission's decision on Pajaro/Sunny Mesa came, ironically, on the heels of a report from the California Department of Water Resources entitled "The Role of Desalination in Meeting California's Water Needs." The report sought to outline the long-term role of desal throughout the state, including cost, opportunities and challenges.

Among the findings presented by Jerry Johns, the department's deputy director, was that water supplies throughout the state are declining because of lack of surplus of water from the Colorado River.

Desalination, he said, is one of several ideas that should be explored in providing state water supplies. Desalination is beneficial because it's drought-proof, ocean water is renewable, and it can make use of previously unusable sources.

But environmentalists were quick to put down desal plants in favor of conservation.

"The first thing we should look at is conservation," said commissioner Sara Wan, "because when you go down the desal path, there are all of these other impacts."

She did not list them. But environmentalists don't like certain types of desalination plants because they kill marine organisms.

Mark Massara, Sierra Club's director of coastal programs, reiterated Wan's sentiments.

"Conservation and water efficiency will more than supply Californians with their water without the need for very expensive and environmentally damaging desal projects," Massara said.

The state has allocated $50 million of taxpayer funds for desal projects. In 2006, the department will provide $21.5 million in matching funds to desal operators, including $1.5 million for pilot plant projects, Johns said.

About $1 billion to $2 billion in desal funding could provide 500,000 acre-feet per year by 2030, including 300,000 acre-feet of potable water from brackish water desalination and 200,000 acre-feet from ocean water, he added.

"Brackish desal is a little cheaper," Johns said.

Sand City's proposed desal plant would turn brackish water into potable, commissioner Dave Potter commented.

There are currently 24 desal plants operating or in various stages of development. Another 41 plants are planned, Johns said.

Johns said the challenges facing desalination include cost, which he said is becoming more competitive, the environmental impacts, use of energy, and planning and regulatory issues.

Jo Mora exhibit will be Carmel Mission's first art show

By CHRIS COUNTS

CARMEL MISSION, the city's oldest and most revered building, is hosting an art show to honor Jo Mora, one of its most revered sculptors and painters.

The show, which will open Friday, June 23, will continue through the end of the year.

"This is the first time the Mission has done anything like it," explained Peter Hiller, curator of the exhibit.

Born in Uruguay in 1876, Mora became a diverse and prolific artist. Over the course of his life, he immersed himself in drawing, painting, illustration, cartooning, sculpture, photography, mapmaking and writing.

"His versatility as an artist is truly engaging," said Hiller. "He worked in just about every medium."

Mora, who moved to California in 1903, was fascinated by local history and drawn to the legacy of the California missions, which were in a general state of disrepair when he first visited them just after the turn of the century. His timing was perfect — by the 1920s, an ambitious effort to restore the missions was underway, and Mora was commissioned to add his artistic touch to a variety of projects.

It was here that Mora created his greatest work, the Father Junipero Serra Cenotaph, a bronze and travertine marble sarcophagus showing Padre Serra lying in state with his friends Padres Crespi, Lopez and Lasuen surrounding him. The sculpture was unveiled at the Mission in 1924.

Mora moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1921, settling in Pebble Beach. He remained here until his death in 1947.

"He is an artist whose work people see on a daily basis," said Hiller. "But most people don't stop to see who is responsible for it."

Other examples of Mora's sculptural work include the carved wooden statue of Serra in Carmel Woods, and a painted sculpture of two early California figures in El Paseo Courtyard at Seventh and Dolores. His many artistic touches in plaster, concrete and bronze, which depict various periods of California history, can still be seen in the old Salinas courthouse. Monterey Blues Festival hits new heights in its 21st year

THE MONTEREY Bay Blues Festival turns 21 this weekend with a diverse lineup of music ranging from gospel to blues, old school and soul.

In no way, shape or form strictly a blues event, the three-day festival has evolved into one of the most successful music events on the West Coast, catering to a broader musical taste.

And despite the eleventh-hour cancellation by Saturday night's main stage headliner, Isaac Hayes, this year's festival still boasts a solid slate of artists performing on three stages situated throughout the historic, oak-studded Monterey Fairgrounds.

Hayes, who last week canceled his 2006 summer tour due to a heart condition, will be replaced by the 4 Kings, an all-star lineup of rhythm and blues performers (every bit as impressive as Hayes) that features Ben E. King (he co-wrote and sang the classic chestnut "Stand By Me"), Lloyd Price, Gene Chandler and Jerry Butler.

The weekend party kicks off on Friday evening at 6 p.m. on the Garden Stage with Charnagne Scott and the Motown Express and moves into the Main Arena with performances by Sai Whatt and Texas roots rocker and three-time Grammy Award winner Delbert McClinton. Saturday's main stage performers include this year's Battle of the Bands winner Gregg Wright, Buckwheat Zydeco, perennial favorite Clarence Carter, "bluesman lover" Theodis Easley, Denise LaSalle and the 4 Kings, plus local blues legend John "Broadway" Tucker returning to the main stage for the first time in 20 years. Sunday morning's concert features a triple header of gospel acts that includes Bay Area newcomer Roy Tyler & New Direction, gospel legend Yolanda Adams, Linda Tillery and the Cultural Heritage Choir.

The festival wraps up Sunday evening with acoustic blues artist Eric Bibb, a Chicago Blues Reunion and a Temptations Review. More than four dozen bands will perform throughout the weekend on the President and Garden stages. For a complete lineup and to purchase tickets, visit the festival website at www.montereyblues.com.

At Sly McFly's on Cannery Row, owner/proprietor Jack Burnam has put together a mini blues festival of his own that began Thursday night with a performance by this year's MBBF Battle of the Band runner-up Jimmie McElroy. Performing at the popular Monterey blues club June 23, NiteCry, last year's battle winner, celebrates the release of their latest CD "Back In Town"; Saturday night yet another previous battle winner Shane Dwight plays his fiery brand of rock-oriented blues, and on Sunday evening jazz crooner Lee Durley hosts a post-festival blues jam — an event that attracts many of the artists performing at the MBBF. For info call the club at (831) 649-8050.

Performing this weekend at Monterey Live (your alternative to the blues), Tucson-based the Warsaw Poland Brothers plays everything from Celtic to Ska this June 23 and 24 at the intimate venue on Alvarado Street. On the road for the better part of the last eight years, Warsaw has released four nationally distributed albums through their own indie label and have developed a strong Monterey following. The music starts at 9:30 p.m. Call (831) 877-548-3237 for tickets.

Dottie Dodgion, the first lady of jazz on the Monterey Peninsula, calls periodically to check in, and she is excited about her new weekly gig at the Inn at Spanish Bay's Lobby Lounge. Joining the Dot (who will be singing and playing drums) is bassist Scott Steed and young pianist Eddie Mendenhall. The music starts at 7 p.m. and the lounge swings right on until 11 p.m. Tell the guards at the gate that the Dot sent you and they will probably let you into Del Monte Forest free.

The 70th annual Monterey County Fair is scheduled for the week of Aug. 15-20 at the Monterey Fairgrounds, and organizers are looking for local performers that want to showcase their talents on the Community Stage. Interested individuals and organizations, including dancers, musicians, singers and other types of performers, are encouraged to call Wilson Events at (707) 763-9534. Monterey County Fair broke records in 2006 with more 61,000 attendees who enjoyed a wide array of entertainment and activities.

Exciting new venues and entertainment for fairgoers of all ages are scheduled for 2006.

also displays his work.

The Mora exhibit will include an original leather shield from the 1769 Portola Expedition which Mora owned. Also featured will be rarely seen drawings and watercolors Mora created as he traced Serra's route and explored the California missions on horseback in 1903.

Access to the exhibit is included in the mission entry fee, which is $5 for adults, $1 for children aged 6 to 17, and free for children under 5. The exhibition is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call (831) 624-1271 or visit www.carmelmission.org.

Pacific Grove gallery presents new still life exhibit

Hauk Fine Arts in Pacific Grove will host a reception Friday, June 23, for a new exhibit by Carmel artist Pamela Carroll. "Shadow Play" focuses on recent still-life work by Carroll, who doubles as a fine artist and an illustrator of children's books.

"She's a very good realist," explained Nancy Hauk, gallery co-owner. "What I especially like is her choice of subject matter. She picks a subject she loves and really takes it to another level."

Carroll, whose style of painting has been influenced by the early Dutch masters, received the "People's Choice" award last year at a juried exhibition at the Monterey Museum of Art.

The reception starts at 5 p.m. The gallery is located at 206 Fountain Ave. and is open Wednesdays through Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call (831) 373-6007.

Plein aire exhibit and contest follows Big Sur garden tour

The Big Sur Arts Initiative — a local non-profit which provides arts programs, educational opportunities and cultural events for Big Sur residents — will present a plein aire exhibit and competition Saturday, June 24, at Studio One. The festive event will follow the sold-out Big Sur Hidden Gardens Tour.

At least 25 regional artists will paint throughout the day in the traditional California plein aire style. Many will be painting on location in gardens featured on the tour.

After the tour is completed, artists and participants will meet at Studio One, located next door to the Big Sur River Inn, for a "Wet Paint" reception and sale. The public is invited to vote on a favorite piece for a "People's Choice" award. Participating artists will also choose a piece for an "Artist's Choice" award.

The event begins at 5 p.m. For more information, call (831) 667-1530 or visit www.bigsurarts.org.

And the volleyball court, which still exists at Lovers Point, was the main source of fitness for hippies — not necessarily known for their athleticism.

Pacific Grove neighborhoods that are now highly desirable and completely unaffordable for many were once crash pads and party houses for the counterculture kids.

"There was a ton of activity on 16th to 19th streets below Lighthouse Avenue," Aberg said. "If you just take a walk on those streets, you find some funky little cottages. That was the heartthrob of the hippie pulse, you could say."

McCleary said Pacific Grove and Monterey were obvious draws due to their proximity to the Bay Area.

"A lot of people started in San Francisco and they sort of filtered down into the smaller towns down the coast, and the Monterey Peninsula was one of those areas. It's close to Big Sur, which was a center of the counterculture energy."

It was watching Janis Joplin perform "Ball and Chain" at the Monterey Pop Festival on June 17, 1967, that led McCleary to embrace an alternative lifestyle. The life-changing moment set him on a journey around the world to visit other hippie centers, such as Amsterdam, London, India and Greenwich Village in New York City.

And although sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll drew many to the hippie scene, the movement went far beyond that.

"It wasn't the most important part of the culture," McCleary said. "Many people soon found out there was more depth in the political, social, religious and ecological concerns of the time."

McCleary himself, admittedly still a hippie, lived in a half-dozen makeshift homes in Pacific Grove.

"I lived in Pacific Grove a lot," he said. "There were a lot of rentals that were chicken coops or garden storage units, and they remodeled them and put doors and windows on them, and we lived there. There are still a lot of places like this."

And McCleary said he still hangs out with his old hippie friends.

"That community still exists," he said. "I have a group of 50 to 60 friends that I knew during that period of time, and we still get together. The hippies never did leave. They never did disappear."

To hear the full scoop on hippie culture in Pacific Grove and New Monterey, attend McCleary's lecture at 7:30 p.m., Friday, June 23, at the Pacific Grove Performing Arts Center on Forest Avenue at Hillcrest. The lecture is free for Heritage Society members and $5 for the public.

'Theme-park design'

Board member Erik Dyar condemned Mandurrango's design, which includes different architectural styles for streetscape variety.

"My basic problem with it is its fundamental design strategy. You take three different historical styles, and somehow that's supposed to create some differentiation with the historic district, which seems ludicrous to me," he said. "It smacks of a theme-park design strategy and plays into this idea some people may have that Carmel is a Disneyland historical theme park for tourists."

Dyar said he understood the need to break up the building's exterior to make it visually interesting, but he questioned Mandurrango's technique.

"And it seems to me replacing such a significant building, historical or not, it deserves to be replaced by something at least as good," he continued. "This is a major project for Carmel and deserves a high standard."

The board unanimously voted to suggest the planning commission not certify the EIR — which concludes the proposed design would not produce adverse environmental impacts on the adjacent historic district — because it fails to consider how Mandurrango's plans "would blur the visual distinction between the proposed project and the historic downtown."

Afterward, board members requested design changes to further differentiate it. Wendt suggested Mandurrango incorporate the Homescapes Carmel building.

"The basic issue is what you want on that corner is to maintain distinction," she said.

Board member Erling Lagerholm said he did not want to design the project, so he opposed the motion, with the rest of the HRB voting to request significant changes. Board member Paul Coss was absent.

Chef Ayers can't stand the heat, so he got into a kitchen here

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

EXECUTIVE CHEF Mark Ayers commutes four miles to work from his digs in Carmel-by-the-Sea, driving up scenic Highway 1 to the Highlands Inn.

From the elegant Pacific's Edge restaurant and the more casual California Market, he oversees a combined staff of four sous chefs and 30 line cooks from what possibly may be the most beautiful vista of the Pacific Ocean to be found anywhere.

Here he gets to work 50 to 60 hours a week with his "great group of cooks" in the organized chaos of a hard-working hotel kitchen that is host, to the renowned Masters of Food & Wine extravaganza, even now gearing up for its 21st annual presentation in February 2007.

During the Masters, as aficionados call it, some 30 to 35 famous chefs from around the world congregate at the Highlands Inn, Park Hyatt Carmel, to work their magic for luncheons, dinners and cooking demos for foodies who come from all over the United States to savor the cuisine.

As host executive chef, Ayers is in charge. "Sometimes we'll have 48 cooks in the kitchen at once," he said, preparing their specialties for a luncheon or dinner.

Although the Highlands kitchen is large by most restaurant standards, 48 cooks working in close proximity is a sight to see. Plating up is done on long tables positioned down the middle of the kitchen.

He has four Masters to his credit since coming to the Highlands Inn in 2002 and is looking forward to 2007. He dispelled reports of the Masters of Food & Wine no longer being held there. "It will be held here always, but there may be two other Masters events in the offing in two other countries," he said. It's too soon to say where and when just yet.

He had perfect preparation experience for the Masters when he organized chefs at the Park Hyatt Beaver Creek in Colorado, where he was executive sous chef for seven years before coming to California. "We hosted the International Pastry Competition three times while I was there," he said.

Ayers became involved in restaurant work in his hometown in Pennsylvania when he was 16. "My first job when I was a kid was at an independent little restaurant where I washed dishes Saturday and Sunday mornings. I'd hurry through my work so I could help the prep cooks. Then one day I came to work and my name wasn't shown on the dishwasher schedule, but on the prep cook schedule." He was elated and continued on as a prep cook, working weekends all through high school.

But his parents wanted him to be an engineer. His father, a plant geneticist, was on the faculty of the College of Agriculture at Pennsylvania State University. Young Ayers put in four semesters there while continuing his weekend cooking — now as a top line chef — but was “more into my cooking than my classes,” he said.

Food & Wine

He left school, continued cooking, then decided to attend the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y. He graduated in 1992 and began his culinary career in earnest.

San Francisco stood out in his mind as being a fine restaurant city; he set out with that destination in mind. He stopped in Denver, Colo., to see his sister and in Vail to visit a friend. That's as close to San Francisco as he ever got on his trip west. He was hired at Patina restaurant in Vail as a line cook. In his first few years, with plenty of free time to himself, he also got in more than 100 hours of skiing. As he rose in the kitchen, he skied less.

At the Park Hyatt Beaver Creek, he acquired more executive skills and was called to the Highlands Inn.

He is pleased to be in California on the Monterey Peninsula, where it is almost always cool. “I hate the heat,” he said.

During the past few years at the Highlands Inn, Ayers has done a sorcerer's job transforming the menu into a unique Chef's Menu and a Tasting Menu.

The Chef's Menu currently comprises an amuse bouche, followed by ahi and hamachi; a seared day boat scallop, and grilled Tasmanian salmon — all paired with imported wines. After an intermezzo, seared venison loin is served with a 2001 Whitcraft Winery, Lagrein, French Camp Vineyard of San Luis Obispo.

A bing cherry tartlet completes the dinner with a non-vintage Bonny Doon Vineyard, Framboise, Infusion of Raspberries, Washington.

All this is offered at $90 per person, or $150 per person inclusive of wine.

The Tasting Menu offers 20 dishes. Diners may choose three of these for $66, four for $74 or five for $82. Wine director Mark Buzan will select wines to complement any of these dishes on request.

For all the haute cuisine he prepares or oversees, and for all his training in classical French cuisine, Chef Ayers' cooking philosophy is, “Keep it simple; find products that are great, flavorful and in season — then let them take over.”

“You have to start with the good stuff, and don't mess it up,” he concluded.

Pacific's Edge restaurant is open for dinner nightly from 6 to 9:30 p.m. For reservations, call (831) 622-5445.

SKIPPER MCKRAY, 5, a West Highland White terrier, is visiting from Yuba City with his Mom Louise and Dad Rich. He is the houseguest of "Auntie" Cindy Beam of Monterey.

Aunt Cindy used to live in Carmel and will be resuming her residency here sometime soon, but in the meantime, when Skipper comes for a visit, Aunt Cindy always drives him over to Carmel Beach from Monterey.

When Skipper is brought over, he becomes very excited in the car when he starts recognizing landmarks because they tell him he'll soon be at the ocean. Skipper is a wader, not a swimmer, and loves to run and play with his ball at the beach.

Although an "only child," Skipper is not spoiled, according to Aunt Cindy. Mom Louise is a school principal and Auntie Cindy is a retired Denver, Colo., detective — so Skipper minds his Ps and Qs and makes no waves. Auntie gives Skipper a treat of Parmesan cheese sprinkled on his dog food as a reward for being so good.

The McKrays visit three or four times a year. Mom Louise grew up in Pacific Grove, so she and Dad Rich would like to return someday, which would please Skipper no end, as Yuba City is totally devoid of ocean.

His favorite toy is a stuffed dolphin with a squeaker which he can play with for a long time without tiring of it.

While visiting here, Skipper sleeps with his aunt, but at home he retires with Mom and Dad.

Before leaving town, Skipper will visit the Cypress Inn with his folks for an exciting chin wag with other dogs, possibly with another Westie. It's always the highlight of his vacation here.

was just mind-blowing," she said. Homeless dogs roam the streets, where they are hit by cars, abused and starved.

"The government will go out every once in a while and put out poison for the dogs," she said, but those that escape continue breeding, and the population booms again. Janes' group offers neutering at no cost.

She visits the country at least twice a year and has been known to bring home a few of its more heartbreaking cases.

"I've brought back nine on various trips, but a lot of people get mad when I say that because we have dogs here who need help," she said. "But it's just so completely different there. The dogs have a 0.0001 chance of living a decent life. The rest are going to be absolutely miserable — always starving, thirsty and abused. People throw rocks at them."

The couple's ranch in the Mt. Diablo foothills, where they keep three horses, is also home to seven dogs, but Janes worries Anamarie will get trod underfoot by a horse or bullied by the other canines. The property has steep hills difficult for the puppy to navigate in her cart, so she's often confined to the porch.

The ideal home for Anamarie would include a yard with a soft lawn where she could relax. "She just likes to be petted and have chewies and lie in the grass," Janes said.

And Anamarie needs an owner who can provide some specific care. Janes believes she might regain some feeling in her legs, but the poor pup's paralysis makes her incontinent. At night she's diapered and in the morning, washed, just like a baby.

"But everybody's just in awe of her, and she's very cute, too," Janes said. Anyone interested in adopting Anamarie should call (925) 337-1277. Janes said she is willing to travel to Carmel multiple times if it means finding her Romanian orphan a proper home.

What the question was

ONE OF the very adept methods big-city newspapers use to mislead their readers is to start a story with a phony premise. The story may be grossly inaccurate, but because most of it seems to make perfect sense in the context of the fake lead, even an experienced news consumer may not notice he's being lied to.

Such it was with some of the coverage of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision this week on the Clean Water Act.

"The Supreme Court on Monday came close to rolling back one of the country's fundamental environmental laws," said the New York Times in its lead story Tuesday.

The veteran reporter who wrote that sentence — and surely she knew exactly what she was doing — completely misrepresented not only what the court's decision in two Clean Water Act cases meant. She also misstated what the Supreme Court was asked to decide.

The question before the court in a pair of cases from Michigan wasn't whether the environment should be protected or whether the nation's rivers, lakes, streams, wetlands and seasonal ponds should be off-limits to pollution or development. The question was simply this: If the nation's bodies of water are to be protected, who has the authority to do so?

To answer it, one must start with the U.S. Constitution, which enumerates the powers of the various branches of the federal government and which is explicit that everything not listed as a power of Congress, the Executive Branch or the Judiciary is "reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

Of course, in its list of the powers of the federal government, the document on which our nation was founded doesn't include a single word about protecting the environment, which wasn't an issue in 1787.

Nevertheless, in the last forty years, various U.S. agencies have become zealous about all sorts of environmental causes. So where did Washington get the power to enact the Clean Water Act, the Endangered Species Act, etc.?

These laws flow from the Constitution's Commerce Clause, (Art. I, Sec. 8) which gives Congress the power to "regulate commerce ... among the several states."

In the case of the Clean Water Act, Congress decided pollution of the Mississippi River, Lake Michigan and other substantial bodies of water would impact commerce in states that border them. Accordingly, the act required the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (which previously had dedicated itself to preventing floods, building dams and draining swamps) to switch hats and start prohibiting "discharges" into the nation's "navigable waters" — a rather limited mandate that seemed to fit squarely within the Commerce Clause.

But somehow, as the years went by, the Army's engineers became extremely ambitious about expanding their jurisdiction. According to court documents, by 1980, "navigable waters" was construed to mean not only rivers and lakes, but "streams, tributaries, mudflats, sandflats, wetlands, sloughs, prairie potholes, wet meadows, playa lakes or ponds," also, "ephemeral streams, drainage ditches, storm sewers, dry arroyos and irrigation channels," not to mention, "coulees, washes, drain tiles and culverts." Anyone planning to develop a piece of property containing one of these features had to get a permit from the corps. Could all that authority possibly flow from the Commerce Clause and the words, "navigable waters"?

That was the question before the high court: Whether the U.S. Government had the power to micromanage planning decisions in every corner of the country.

The court's answer was No. But that doesn't mean small bodies of water and isolated patches of occasionally damp ground now outside the Army corps' jurisdiction can be polluted willy-nilly. It means that the power to prohibit or regulate that pollution goes back to the states. Which is where the Constitution says it should be.

Save the bank building

Dear Editor,

The issues surrounding the proposed demolition and replacement of the former Great Western Bank building, now occupied by Homescapes, are central to a greater problem facing Carmel, namely, the precipitous decline in the community's historical appreciation and esteem for all things of cultural value. This is especially true in the realm of art and architecture. The building, originally designed as a bank by two of Carmel's most talented architects, Walter Burde and Will Shaw, was immediately on its completion recognized as an exceptionally fine work. This should be the principal reason for its retention. The age of a structure is not necessarily worth treasuring, but an excellent design is.

The possible approval of its demolition to make room for another development on the site threatens to continue the city's habitual acceptance of bad design throughout the residential and the commercial district. Carmel, because of its failure to insist on the level of esthetic excellence that was its historical standard, is morphing into just another mediocre high-priced suburb, flooded with examples of the latest cheesy popular fads. In this case, the least that must be done is to insist on a level of architectural quality in any replacement building commensurate with the demolished structure.

Decisions on what is important architecture should be made by Carmelites, not outside consultants who haven't a clue about the community's history, traditions and essence.

Most reporters are trustworthy

Dear Editor,

When I read Virginia Hennessey's recent articles in the Monterey County Herald newspaper regarding two of our local judges (May 28 and June 9), I immediately thought of Mark Twain's quote, "Get your facts first and then you can distort them as much as you please."

Unfortunately, Ms. Hennessey completely failed to get her facts straight before embarking on her distortion.

In that light, I commend your paper for its excellent and thorough June 9 article concerning the Herald's obviously misleading and unfair articles about these two respected judges.

I worked with both of them for many years. I also dealt with Virginia Hennessey frequently during my 21 years on the Monterey County Bench. Therefore I can honestly say that I feel Ms. Hennessey's articles were both biased and unfair. Unfortunately this is not an isolated instance.

I have come to know most of the Herald's reporters over the years and almost without exception I have liked and respected them. Virginia Hennessey is the only reporter that I grew to distrust.

It is refreshing that finally someone is holding Virginia Hennessey accountable for her biased and unfair reporting and her most questionable journalistic tactics.

How to win war on terror

Dear Editor,

In response to Mike Biele and his call to Americans to help him end the war, I would like to offer some ideas to accomplish an end to the war on terror, as I noticed he omitted anything constructive.

First, I would suggest Mr. Biele visit the militant madrassas throughout the world where the Islamic fundamentalist terror religion is taught.

He might try to convince them that Americans are mostly nuanced and sensitive like he is and they shouldn't mandate slicing our infidel heads off.

Then, he might travel to the UN and speak with all the member nations that fund and support suicide bombers and tyrannical dictators who dream of a nuclear bomb wiping America off the face of the earth. Maybe a group therapy session with a terror cell currently making bombs and plotting their next attack would be useful. You know ... "We feel your hatred," etc.

I will not qualify my pro war-on-terror position by listing everyone in my family who has served this great nation as a way to validate my opinion and insulate me from criticism, or claim that I served myself, because I haven't.

But I will tell you that I wish I had. I'd gladly replace my life with that of a heroic soldier. There is not a day since 9/11 that I have not thought of those whose lives were horrifically taken. I knew quite a few. Mr. Biele, maybe you can have another "flash of insight" and mourn the loss of the 3,000 innocents on that day, and their progeny, etc.

I do not need to view crosses on a beach to remind me of the brave men who have sacrificed for my safety and future world peace. I pray for their souls daily. If I were to tell a soldier that I thought his effort was part of an "expensive farce," no doubt he'd be insulted.

How do I know this? I write letters and send care packages to our troops in Iraq through Operation Yellow Ribbon and Cards and Cocoa for the Troops.

Those wonderful men and women often take the time to write back and tell us how proud they are of the important work they are doing building a free country. They believe that liberty and freedom are worth fighting and dying for, especially after being cheered and thanked by the children in Iraq.

I met an Iraqi woman who, through tears of gratitude, told me about the generosity of American soldiers taking a collection to buy wheel chairs for the victims of Saddam who had had their legs chopped off. She bravely organized the first women's movement to include equal rights in the new Iraqi constitution. I'd expect her to take offense if I told her "American blood is too precious to waste" for something as trivial as that.

I'd remind Mr. Biele that our men are dying so that the women in Iraq and Afghanistan can vote. Spreading democracy is never a "political farce," but your veiled call for Americans to join the tone-deaf chorus of "cut and run" certainly is.

God bless our brave military.

Denise Swift, Carmel

Restore library hours

Dear Editor,

When staff was cut at the Park Branch Library in July 2004, the hours were reduced and Saturdays were eliminated altogether. The summer reading program has been scaled back, too, because of the limited staff. These changes drastically impacted my family's access to the public library.

As a parent, resident and local author, it was extremely disheartening for me to read in the May 26 Pine Cone that, despite many speakers in favor of increased library hours, city staff recommended no increase in open hours at the Park Branch children's library. The impression is that the city administration is opposed to restoring any hours at either library building.

In order to restore service hours, additional staff would need to be hired. The city pays for staff, building maintenance and utilities only. All of the other library expenses are funded by library revenues and gifts from the Carmel Public Library Foundation — some $352,000 per year. It doesn't seem logical to have all this support for library resources from the community and then close the library doors due to lack of staffing.

It would cost at estimated $50,000 to restore youth services library hours. I understand the city is planning to spend $90,000 to appraise its art collection and will hire a part-time secretary for the community services department.

I believe the library provides one of the most important services to our community.

The library board has requested the city restore library hours to pre-July 2004 levels. Representatives of the library foundation have advocated publicly for more hours.

Carmel, please support the library, families and literature.

M. Galley, Carmel

"Carmel Legends"

In total contrast is Frank Lloyd Wright's only seaside house (out of literally hundreds he designed). We can be thankful to Delia Walker, who still lives in the house, for persuading the famous architect to design "a small house on a rocky promontory, on the seaward side of Scenic Road, low enough that it would not interfere with the neighbors' view". Wright was 84 years old when he accepted this challenge, still extremely busy, but delighted to do a special house for his long-time friend. The result — and it should be noted that Wright spent many weeks during 1952 supervising the construction — is a marvel of youthful imagination. It will surely stand for many many years.

A prow of Carmel stone, mined from the same quarry which supplied the Mission, juts into the sea, splitting the waves that dash ceaselessly against it. On its "deck" of stone sits the house, properly set below the street level, a fantastic structure of stone, steel, cedar and copper, following in every detail except its massive central fireplace the design and decor of an ocean liner. The fireplace stones are set at an angle of approximately 20 degrees, a nicety of structural balance not by the masons who "corrected" it, only to be corrected in their turn by the fastidious Mr. Wright.

Facing the wind is a graceful stone statue of a mermaid, call Undine. The owners, Mr. and Mrs. van Loden Sets (formerly Mrs. Walker), wistfully explain that, though she has looked pretty for many years, Undine is still a virgin and therefore soulless.
